The cashier agreed and the woman started to eat. As she ate, she began to feel strange. She started to see things that weren't there. She saw rats running around the parlor and spiders crawling on the walls. She started to hear voices that were not there. The voices told her to kill the cashier.

The woman fought the voices, but they were too strong. She grabbed a knife and stabbed the cashier to death. The woman was arrested and charged with murder. She was found guilty and sentenced to death. The woman was executed and her body was buried in a pauper's grave.

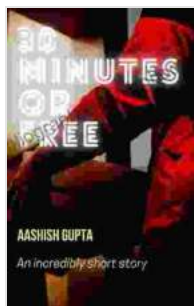

The pizza parlor was never the same after that night. People said that the ghost of the murdered cashier still haunted the parlor. They said that they could hear her screams and see her bloody body lying on the floor.

One night, a group of teenagers decided to go to the pizza parlor to see if the rumors were true. They sat down at a table and ordered a pizza. As they waited for their pizza, they started to hear strange noises. They heard footsteps coming from the kitchen and laughter that didn't sound human.

The teenagers were scared, but they were also curious. They decided to investigate the noises. They followed the footsteps to the kitchen and opened the door. They saw the ghost of the murdered cashier standing in the middle of the kitchen. She was covered in blood and her eyes were glowing red.

The teenagers screamed and ran out of the pizza parlor. They never went back again.

The pizza parlor is still open today, but it is said that the ghost of the murdered cashier still haunts the place. People say that they can hear her screams and see her bloody body lying on the floor.
