A Trail of Enigmatic Graves

Burial 1: The Nameless Corpse

In 1907, a body was discovered in a field in Hertfordshire, England. The body was that of a young woman, approximately 25 years old, with no identification. The woman was buried in an unmarked grave, her name and identity lost to time.

Burial 2: The Enigma of Jessica Carter

In 1920, another body was discovered, this time in a cemetery in London. The body was identified as that of Jessica Carter, who was believed to have died in 1907. However, inconsistencies in the records surrounding her death raised questions about her true identity.

Unraveling the Truths

The discovery of the multiple burials prompted a thorough investigation, led by historian and author Adele Blackwood. Blackwood meticulously examined the evidence, from death certificates to burial records, and pieced together a fascinating and disturbing tale.
